Boston, Sept. 25, 1858.

My dear McKim:

I lose no time in replying to your letter, just received. for me

I do not think it worth while, to attempt giving an anti-slavery address in Philadelphia. I shall not arrive in your city till Tuesday afternoon, ^{Oct. 5th,} when I shall make my way directly to the Anti-Slavery office, and will then go out to your residence, or that of James and Lucretia Mott, and spend the night, if thought best by you. Wednesday morning we must be off for Westchester.

At the request of Thomas Whitson, I have agreed to go to Christiana immediately after the close of your anniversary, and give a lecture on Sunday, Oct. 10th, at Port, on my way to Ohio. If arrangements could be made for me satisfactorily, I should like to speak at Harrisburg and Pittsburg en route.

I could also speak at one or two other places, perhaps, in the State, if the meetings were arranged consecutively, so as to lose no time. I must be in Salem, Ohio, as early as Oct. 15th - Friday.

I feel very happy at the thought of so soon meeting you and my other dear Pennsylvania friends, face to face.

Plan for me as you may think best, and I will try to act in conformity therewith.

With warm regards to your wife, and all "the household of faith," I remain,

Yours, faithfully,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.

J. Miller McKim.
